

Antonio Elia is Full Professor of Vegetable Crop Science in the Department of Agriculture, Food, Natural resources and Engineering (DAFNE) at the University of Foggia (Italy).

Already i) Chair of the BS Course in Agricultural Science and Technology, Foggia University, ii) Chair of the Vegetable Crops Section of the Italian Society of Horticulture (SOI), iii) member of the Academic Senate of the University of Foggia, iv) member in evaluator panels for the scientific qualification of Italian researchers (ASN 2012) research institutions (VQR 2011-2014) and national and EU Research projects. Currently Member board of the PhD Course in Innovation Management Systems in Agro-Food of the Med. Regions. Currently teaching and researching in vegetable crops science, his main scientific interests are on: 1) vegetables mineral nutrition; 2) agronomical techniques for enhancing vegetable yield and quality; 3) sustainable vegetable production systems; 4) management of soilless systems under Mediterranean conditions; 5) protected cultivation; 6) nursery plant production; 7) effect of mycorrhizal inoculation; 8) crop modelling and DSS development for managing irrigation and fertilization. He is author of about 200 papers. Scopus HI= 22 (Dec. 2021).

Website: <https://sites.google.com/a/unifg.it/antonio-elia/about-me>